

Sociology Club Brings Alumni Back To Campus

The Sociology Club, comprised of students majoring in or having an interest in sociology, is the latest campus organization to sponsor an Alumni Career Day. Ten alumni currently engaged in social work or doing graduate studies returned to campus on March 28 to participate in the first annual Sociology Career Day.

The idea of an annual career day, which would invite alumni working in a specialized field back to campus to discuss their experiences and problems with students, was initiated by the Accounting Department. Last October the Business Department adopted the plan. Career Days, now among the major departmental-sponsored events on campus, provide students with an opportunity to gain firsthand experience from alumni already working in areas the students are preparing to enter.

In addition to the career day, the Sociology Club is sponsoring a series of lectures by outside speakers and trips to lectures at other colleges and universities. The Sociology Newsletter, containing comments and news on the club's activities, is mailed to all sociology alumni. The club is under the faculty guidance of Miss Judith Fritz, a National Teaching Fellow from the University of Chicago.

Faculty Votes Dr. Herman Reas Winner Of Alumni Merit Award

By a vote of the faculty of Saint Joseph's College, Dr. Herman Reas '49, of Defiance, Ohio, has been selected as the winner of this year's Alumni Merit Award for his contributions to the field of medical research and practice. The award will be conferred during baccalaureate ceremonies on June 2nd.

Dr. Reas first gained prominence in 1960 as founder of the Cystic Fibrosis Care, Teaching, and Research Clinic at St. Louis Children's Hospital of the Washington University School of Medicine. There in 1963 he performed a large portion of the clinical pharmacology on N-Acetyl-cysteine, a drug which liquefies the thick mucus which frequently clogs the lungs and bronchial tubes of cystic fibrosis patients.

In July of 1964 he became a National Institute of Health Research Fellow in the Department of Pharmacology at Harvard Medical School. Simultaneously, he held the title of Assistant Physician in Medicine at Children's Hospital Medical Center in Boston.

Dr. Reas, who has his medical degree from St. Louis University Medical School, served from 1953-55 with the Army's 325th Airborne Infantry as a regimental surgeon. In 1957 he completed two years of residence in pediatrics and became a teaching fellow in pediatrics at the Jewish Hospital in St. Louis.

In 1964, just before his departure from St. Louis to Harvard, Dr. Reas lost his wife and mother of his six children. Taking the advice of friends in St. Louis, he hired a young former Lutheran missionary as the governess of his children. The story is similar to that of the Von Trapp family in the Sound of Music. Dr. Reas, who said he considers himself a "fairly strict disciplinarian," fell in love with the young missionary and married her. Since then Dr. Reas and his wife Marjorie Anne have added another child to the family. Marjorie Anne is a graduate of Valparaiso University.

Presently Dr. Reas has his practice at the Defiance Clinic. He is on the advisory board of the Northwestern Ohio Medical Planning Commission, which is the implementation of recent legislation regarding continuing education for physicians in heart disease, cancer and stroke. He has been elected to membership in several professional and scientific organizations, including the American Academy of Pediatrics, the American College of Physicians, the New York Academy of Sciences, and the Pan-American Medical Association.

Members of the Alumni Board of Directors held their spring meeting on April 6 in the Alumni Office on campus. During the day-long meeting they discussed the coming year's Alumni Fund campaign, campus publications, the College's athletic program, and the activities of alumni chapters. Seated at the table are: Jim Crook '63, Bernie Balas '57, Keith Snyder '56, George Byerwalter '50, Bill Elbert '53, Gerry LaFontain '35, Joe Moore '50, Bob Lofft '66 (Alumni Director), Chuck Vietzen '57, Bob Conley '41 (President), Jim Zid '55, Dave Cook '61, Phil Wilhelm '63, Dr. Louis Abbott '50, and Mrs. Peg Amsler (alumni office secretary).

Alumni Choose Senior Of The Year

Raymond Kulla, an English major from Arlington Heights, Ill., is the winner of the second annual Senior of the Year Award, sponsored each year by the Alumni Board of Directors of Saint Joseph's College. The announcement was made during the honors and awards ceremonies on Parents' Day, May 5.

Kulla is vice president of the senior class and is the past president of Phi Eta Sigma, the freshman academic honor society. He has also been an active varsity football player, Student Association Election Committee member, and English Club secretary. He was one of five nominees selected for the award on the basis of scholarship and extracurricular activities. A 3.00 cumulative index is necessary to qualify, and each of the five candidates also placed high on the senior balloting for Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities.

The four other nominees for the award were: Steve Brinker, an English major from Cincinnati, O.; Bernard Hengesbaugh, an accounting major from Birmingham, Mich.; Paul Kiffner, a history major from Detroit, Mich.; and Dennis Schommer, a history major from Huntington Beach, Calif.

The award consists of a plaque and $100, contributed by the members of the Alumni Board of Directors. It will be presented during Commencement Exercises on June 2 by Bob Conley '41, president of the Alumni Association.

Five judges collected background information on the candidates, interviewed faculty and administrative members, interviewed the candidates and selected the winner. Proceedings were under the direction of the Association's Committee for Academic Encouragement, chaired by Dr. Louis Abbott '50, of Montecello, Indiana. Judges, joining Dr. Abbott, were: Matt Gembala '63, a pharmacist from Rensselaer; Mrs. Donna Knockel '65, a school teacher from Remington, Ind.; Bill Elbert '53, a teacher from Kentland, Ind.; and Bernie Balas '57, an accountant from Gary, Ind.

Sociology Reunion

Marchal Island, N. Y.

Neighborhood Center Provides New Hope

Alumnus George Marchal '62 has a store on East 122nd Street in Harlem, N. Y., surrounded by tenements, vacant lots, people and problems. For 120 neighborhood boys, Negro and Puerto Rican, his store is an island amid the slums.

Last July, during riots which erupted in the area, police and newsmen were surprised to see that "the small storefront called the Neighborhood Tutorial Center carried on business as usual." During the disturbances local Negro and Puerto Rican adults banded together to form a human blockade around the storefront to protect it from the rioters.

Business has been going on "as usual" since January of 1967, but the nature of the business is unusual. George Marchal is the director of the Neighborhood Tutorial Center, a storefront operation he set up to help boys with problems. (See the New York Daily News story reprinted on this page.)

Last July 30 NBC's "Frank McGee Report" nationally televised a film about the Center. Richard P. Hunt, associate producer of the program, later wrote to George: "As the reporter who covered the story, I thought it was perhaps the best I have ever done—not because of my role, but because of the material. It was inspiring to me to see what one man can do in a deprived area if he has the will to do it."

The audience response to the telecast was impressive. The network received a great many letters commending George for his work, and several people sent cash contributions which were forwarded to him.

Early in July George, with the help of 12 of his fellow New York University interns, expanded the original burned-out building plus two annexes into the present tutorial center. Before that, George had operated the store mainly as a multi-service community center. During the summer months, 40 of the neighborhood's outstanding eighth and ninth graders began running two sessions a day tutoring—on a one-to-one ratio—80 youngsters who needed remedial reading assistance. Perhaps the most unique aspect of the program, known in New York as the Marchal Plan, is that it pays these young tutors $45 a week. George talked the Neighborhood Youth Corps into providing the funds.

George explained why he prefers his program to operate in storefronts rather than in school buildings. "Perhaps of paramount importance," George says, "is the reality that formal school has not been successful for our young clients. For many reasons, school has become the equivalent of failure, frustration, embarrassment, and feelings of inferiority, fear, or even hatred. To have a remedial program in a non-threatening environment is to offer these poorly achieving children an opportunity to come to grips with academic subject matter in friendly and familiar territory.

"In addition, these storefronts are readily accessible and observable to the students, their parents, and the community. One can walk past a school building and remain in total ignorance about what might be occurring within. However, it is difficult to walk past a busy and humming storefront without pausing to see what is going on, what friends are in there, pausing to ask questions and make personal evaluations."

ONLY HUMAN Dropouts Drop In

By Sidney Fields

One of the blocks on E. 122d St. is like a cemetery surrounded by shabby tenements, except the dead walk around.

About the only place with life in it, or hope for life, is in a little store George Marchal set up. It's a few streets from Junior High School 45, where George teaches.

The story of the store began last September when a kid asked George for help. He needed it. He was a dropout, and on dope. George helped the kid get off drugs, taught him some reading and math, got him a job and met his mother. The kid had no father.

"He told other kids about it and I found myself with 18 dropouts," George said, "not only around here, but in the Bronx and Brooklyn. The best thing was to get one central place, but a place I could afford."

George Marchal and his "students"

The rent for the store was $45 a month because it was in a burned out building. He and the kids, their parents and some teachers cleaned it out, plastered the holes, painted it, replaced the rotted floors and built some bookcases. His principal, Seymour Levey, gave him $50 and some used furniture and books. The windows are covered with colored paper and boarded up outside.

"There's nothing to fear from most of the people on the street," George said, "but there are drifters. And I'm not naive enough to think everybody loves us."

Place of Refuge

He opened the place last January for 20 boys. They had troubles at home, with reading, their English; they had no jobs. Five were on dope. He got 19 of them jobs. The addicts dropped him and their jobs.

"But this became a refuge for the rest of them" George said, "a place where a few people recognize they exist."

As a teacher, he earns less than $5,000 a year. Most of it goes to run the store and help the kids.

He excused himself abruptly to greet two kids; one pale-faced, thin; the other, thinner, gaunt, bleary-eyed. He came back and explained the first hadn't been to school and his alibi was that he behaves so badly he's afraid he'll get kicked out and won't graduate and he wants to graduate.

Glue and Heroin

"The other one is on glue and heroin," George said. "We've quite a few on this block. If they don't get it out of the way, there isn't much you can do for them."

After he's through teaching, he spends all his afternoons, evenings and weekends at the store, except for two hours on Wednesdays and Thursdays when he's at NYU, taking a second degree in how to teach disadvantaged children.

He's 25 and from Greenville, Ohio. His father, an attorney, always gave his six kids a nice, comfortable home. As soon as George was graduated from Saint Joseph's College (Ind.), he joined the Peace Corps, spent two years in Malawi, Africa, teaching and running a hospital he reopened after the docotr left. He got back here a year ago for his present work.

"I thought I'd have only dropouts here," he said, "but then the idea hit me: why not get the bright kids to teach those who might become dropouts?"

City Promises Aid

With all the courage of innocence, he got to the Mayor's office and was given a promise of city help. So he enrolled over 30 smart kids from 9 to 12 to tutor 80 of their peers who need it. Ten adult volunteers will help supervise the whole effort. The adults are members of the National Teachers Corps. They teach and attend college, too. George is one of them.

"That doesn't mean I'll drop the dropouts," George said. "That will go on."

Ask him why he does all this and he tells you simply that there's a need for it and his father gave him a good education and everything else and he thinks he should spread it around a little.

"It isn't all a one-way street," he said. But what he'd like you to see is the face of a kid who reads for the first time or gets a job and buys his own clothes.

"There's a light in his face," he said, "like... like it's his first Christmas."

Alienation Seminar

For the second consecutive summer the College will offer a tuition-free seminar course for high school students with above-average scholastic rankings. The topic and theme of this summer's honors course will be Alienation.

Following the format of last summer's seminar in Aggression, the course will be taught in dialogue fashion with three faculty members present at all times. There will be a list of basic readings, significant movies to supplement the course, and emphasis on student initiative.

The purpose of the summer honors program is to awaken and educate young people to the major problems of today, hoping perhaps that some will devote their lives to exploring and resolving these problems. A secondary purpose is experimental: to shed light on the practicality of some of the innovative "total immersion" techniques utilized by the team of instructors.

Some of the problems to be explored include alcoholism, withdrawal, loneliness, violence, and fatalism. The teaching staff consists of faculty members from literature, sociology, and psychology with all three professors holding Ph.D.'s in their fields.

The program is primarily for those who have just completed their junior year of high school with an average of B or better. Tuition, ordinarily $150.00, is free for students accepted in this program. Room and board amount to $180.00 for the seven weeks of the summer session. The students will receive six hours of college credit which may be counted toward a degree.

Dear Bob:

Enclosed with this letter you will find the materials that you wanted. We are in dire need of financial assistance as we depend on the help of individuals, people from the area, for the money that we put into the center. The response of the people in East Harlem has been terrific and we feel we are reaching the "community." We also could use books, art supplies, games, and school supplies.

I really enjoy my work here because there are so many wonderful people living in the area. There is a wealth of talent that must be tapped, and to this end we are working.

I plan to dedicate myself to this work and I hope that many more white Americans will realize the needs of our brothers who don't need pity but who are only asking for the chance to prove that they are equal to any task.

Sincerely,

George M. Marchal '62, Director

Puma Nine Finish With 12-16 Mark; Defeat Kentucky, Lose To Irish

Head baseball coach Dick Pawlow, having fashioned a successful 30-15 record during his first two years at Saint Joseph's, took his 1968 team to Wabash on March 27 for the season opener. The Pumas won handily 8-0.

Since then it has been a season of ups and downs. On March 30, playing the first game on their home field, the Pumas split a doubleheader with Valparaiso, losing the first game 2-8 and winning the second 7-2. Two days later they walked away with the first game of a doubleheader against Franklin College, 8-0. But the Pumas were frustrated in the nightcap, 1-0. It was only the second time in 18 meetings that Franklin has been able to defeat Saint Joseph's.

On April 9 the Pumas began their southern road trip, taking both games of a doubleheader from Evansville, 5-3 and 2-1. Then, on April 11, came the victory of the year as shortstop Dan Henkle singled home the winning run in the tenth inning to defeat the University of Kentucky, 13-12. For Coach Dick Pawlow it was a lesson in the disadvantages of complacency. The Pumas had taken a 12-4 lead into the bottom of the ninth only to be stunned by eight Kentucky runs which tied the score.

The team moved on to split doubleheaders at the University of Chattanooga and Pensacola (Florida) Naval Base. They closed out the Southern tour with a 7-6 loss to the University of Southern Alabama, although the Pumas outthit the hosts 12-5.

Returning home, the team split two games with DePauw, won 12-6 over Saint Procopius, and then traveled to Terre Haute where they dropped two games to Indiana State University.

On April 28th Notre Dame visited Rensselaer for the fifth game ever played between the two teams. Each team had won two of the previous four games. The Irish scored single runs in the third, sixth, and eighth innings to win the game 3-1. The lone Saint Joseph's run came on a home-run by Andy Gerry.

The Pumas reached the .500 mark (10 wins, 10 losses) on May 1 with an 11-0 pounding of Wabash College. On May 4, playing at home, they divided a doubleheader with Butler. From that point on it became a season of frustration. The Pumas, hoping to better their .500 mark, dropped the last six games of the season. The team lost doubleheaders to Lewis College and Ball State and single games to the University of Illinois and Purdue.

The fourth annual President's Dinner was held Sunday evening, April 21, at the Beverly Country Club, Evergreen Park, Ill. Jim Madden '64 (left) was chairman for the event. Appearing with him are: Mr. and Mrs. George Halas, Jr.; Father Charles Banet, President of the College; Mr. and Mrs. Ed McCaskey; and Mr. Sid Luckman, toastmaster for the dinner and newly appointed College trustee.

Fr. Edwin Kaiser Honored With Award

Father Edwin G. Kaiser '15, professor emeritus of theology, was honored with the presentation of the first FATHER EDWIN G. KAISER FACULTY SCHOLAR AWARD during the Saint Joseph's annual Aquinas Convocation on March 7, in the Halleck Center Dining Room. Father Kaiser delivered the main address, entitled "Thomas Aquinas: Holy and Wise for Our Time." The convocation honored newly promoted faculty members and students gaining membership in the academic honor societies, Delta Epsilon Sigma and Phi Eta Sigma.

Father Kaiser taught at Saint Joseph's from 1944 to 1966 when he retired from active teaching. He is now serving as a visiting professor of theology at Saint Charles Seminary in Carthage, Ohio.

FACULTY PROMOTIONS

Dr. Louis Gatto, Dean of the College, announced the following faculty promotions during the Convocation.

Dr. Robert E. Wood was promoted to the rank of associate professor of philosophy. He came to Saint Joseph's in 1961 and holds his master's and doctor's degrees from Marquette University.

John C. Babione, a 1963 graduate of Saint Joseph's, was elevated to the rank of assistant professor of English. He holds his master's degree from Indiana University.

Father Joseph V. Rodak was promoted to the rank of assistant professor of classical languages. He joined the faculty in 1965 and holds a master's degree from John Carroll University.
